One poor man, who looked to his growing crops to pay some money he had barrowed, had watched for several nights his fields. All had gone well, until one morning at daybreak he came into the hut and laid down by the fire to sleep.

Suddenly his watchful wife heard rustling in the bushes near the house. She awoke her husband, only to be laughed at as a foolish woman frightened at the wind stirring the leaves. He turned over and went to sleep again.

Early in the morning the brave woman led a dozen of villagers armed with spears and axes in quest of her husband's game.

When they approached the brushwood, not a soul would enter it. At last a boy, herding some buffaloes, volunteered to drive his animals through the copse.

Suddenly the leader gave an angry grunt, and followed by the rest of the herd, dashed through the copse. "Here he is!" shouted the boy. 'Here is the panther, dead."

The villagers rushed forward, and sure enough, there lay a large panther shot through the heart.

"Brothers, this is the man-eater!" exclaimed an old man, pointing with skinny finger and out-stretched eyeballs. "See, there is the mark of the axe on his head where the Lodhee man struck him. There is the toe on the left foot gone where the Lehonee hunter hit him with a knife when he rushed up the tree after him."

The vast health-giving results already attributed by the newspapers throughout this country and Canada to Dr. Williams "Pink Pills for Pale People" have been recently supplemented by the wonderful curse wrought in the cases of two confirmed invalids in one household in a New England town. The radical improvement in the physical condition of those two people from the use of this great medicine is vouched for, not only by the eager testing in volved for the benefit of other sufferers, but also by the indubitable assurances of disinterested relatives and friends who had been cognizant of the years of pain and distress endured by the two invalids, and who now witness their rectoration to health, vigor and capacity.

A savage roar terrified him. The bubbling growl was unheeded, which if he had been less frightened, would have told him that the beast was mortally wounded.

Fleeing as fast as his legs could carry him, he flung himself into his hut. There he was scolded by his wife for cowardice. If it were a pig they would have meat. If it membrance when I was not more or less I toubled from that source.

"Seven years ago, however, the complaint became greatly aggravated from the nature of my work and other causes, and I suffered greatly from it. My stome ach would not retain food, my head ached constantly, there was a dimness, or blur, before my eyes most of the time, and my head used to become so dizzy I could a scarcely stand. On getting up in the morning my head awam so I was frequently obliged to lie down again. most disagreeable heart-burn, a continuous beiching of gas from the stomach, a nasty coating of the mouth and tongue, and my breath was most offensive. I consulted physicians in Peterboro, and took their medicines for two years, but was helped so slightly by them that at the end of that time I gave up in discouragement, and let the disease take care of itself for a long time. I grew worse as time went on. I have been obliged to give up work many a time for a week or two, and have worked at other times when I ought to have been at home in bed. I have lost many months during the past seven years and would have lost more only for the fact that I stouk it out and would not give up until I had to.

"My appetitie then failed me, and about four years ago I began to notice a fluttering of my heart, which grew so bad after a while that I could not walk any distance without a violent palpitation and complete loss of breath. The pains in my stomach, from indigestion lasted two and three days at a time. I lost considerable flesh, and before long I noticed that my kidneys were affected. This came from my work on the engine, I know, as many railroad men are troubled in the same way. I had awful pains in the small of my back, and was obliged to make water many times during the day.

I could not take too long a vacation, being compelled to work for my living, and so I kept along, taking what stuff the doctors prescribed, but feeling no better, except for a day or two at a time.

been cognizant of the years of pain and distress endured by the two invalids, and who now witness their restoration to health, vigor and capacity.

The names of these people, the latest to testify from their own experience to the marvellous restorative, tonic and healing qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pilis, are Fred C. Vose and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Oliver C. Holt, of Peterboro, members of the same household, which is composed of Mr. and Mrs. Holt, and Mr. and Mrs. Vose, the latter a daughter of the Holts. The home occupied by the family is a cosy and neat looking two-storied house, situated on the top of a hill and surrounded by many of the natural attractions of a residence in the country. Mr. Holt is employed in the Crowell shoe manufactory of Peterboro, and Mr. Vose has for many years run the engine on the Fitchburg railroad trains between Winchendon and Peterboro.

Before entering upon an account of the long illnesses of Mr. Vose and his mother in-law, which shall be given in their own words as taken by a reporter of the Boston Herald, it will be well to give the exact reason for the coming together under one roof of the two families, as this fact has everything to do with the manner in which Dr. Williams' Pink Pilis first came to the notice of Mr. Vose and the reason of their introduction into the family as a madical remedy.

Mr. Vose's wife had been in failing health for a number of years, her illness finally developing into a brain trouble, accompanied by intermittent paralysis of the formal and the children, and the heavy of flick pility in the country of t

The day when a boy puts on his first pair of niminutive trousers is indeed a time of importance. Two children, one in a boy's sailor suit, the other in a little checked woolen frock, were accosted by an interested passer-by one day, as they played together on the side-

"Good-morning, children," said the lady, addressing them with a smile, as she stopped a moment to watch their game of "hop-scotch," "are you brother and sister, playing so nicely together, or," as she saw a somewhat distressed and aggrieved expression on the face of the child in the frock, "are you both boys?" "We aren't relations," replied the other child, "and I'm a boy now, and Tommy's going to be one next week, when he gets his new suit."
